

In-Ground Burial Consists of:

- An interment space
- A burial vault (optional)
- A memorial
- An interment fee

Interment Space

When you purchase an interment space, you are purchasing “interment rights”, meaning the right to designate who may be interred in the space. Interment rights include the right to place a memorial and flower vase where permitted. Right of interment may be purchased for full casket space or cremated remains

Burial Vault

This is an outer burial container that encases the casket. Vaults provide protection for the casket and prevent the interment space from sinking. An outer burial container is optional for all casket burials. Use of a concrete box will reduce casket space within the gravesite from three caskets to two caskets. The cemetery will permit the burial of cremated remains in the gravesite. The placing of up to three urns in the gravesite is permitted without loss of casket space; However, urn burials may be limited by the availability of inscription space on the memorial.

The Memorial

Memorials pay tribute to a life and identify the interment space. Usually constructed of bronze or granite. Memorials vary in size based on the section design and the number of gravesites (lots) purchased.

Interment Fees

The interment fee includes the following: administration, permanent record keeping and documentation, opening and closing of the grave, interment set up, leveling and maintenance of the grave, supplies and other services.

Cost Factors

Your cost depends on several factors including:

1. The location of the interment space you choose;
2. The type of vault you choose;
3. The kind of memorial you want; and
4. The time you make your purchase.

As time goes by, inflation pushes prices up. But you can avoid higher costs in the future by making your selections now.
